
Gray Reed Named a 2018 Best Place to Work in Houston and Dallas

October 26, 2018

Gray Reed is proud to be recognized, once again, as one of the “Best Places to Work in 2018” by the Houston Business Journal and the Dallas Business Journal.

The Houston office ranked 3rd in the large company category and was the only law firm listed. The Dallas office ranked 16th in the medium company category and was the overall highest-ranking law firm.

Gray Reed has been ranked in the Best Places to Work list for nine of the last ten years, an honor the firm feels is a testament to its unique culture.

“We understand that all of our co-workers devote a significant portion of their lives to the firm,” Managing Partner Cary Gray says. “Recognizing that, we strive to maintain a workplace where everyone feels at home and like part of the Gray Reed family, whether it’s an attorney, support staff member or even a client. Being named a best place to work is reflective of everyone’s commitment to preserving that environment.”

The Best Places to Work Lists are compiled by independent research firm Quantum Workplace, which sent a survey to employees of hundreds of nominated companies in each city. Quantum then compiled scores based on worker retention and attraction strategies, corporate culture, amenities and benefits.
