

Gray Reed Named a 2019 Best Place to Work in Houston and Dallas

October 31, 2019

Gray Reed is proud to be recognized, once again, as one of the “Best Places to Work in 2019” by the Houston Business Journal and the Dallas Business Journal.

Our Houston office ranked 5th in the large company category and our Dallas office ranked 17th in the medium company category. Both offices were the highest ranking law firm in their categories.

Gray Reed has been ranked in the Best Places to Work list for ten of the last eleven years, an honor the firm feels is a testament to its unique culture.

“Since the firm opened in 1985, we’ve strived to build and maintain a workplace where everyone feels at home and like part of the Gray Reed family, whether it’s an attorney, support staff member or even a client,” Gray Reed Managing Partner Cary Gray says. “Establishing a tradition of being named a best place to work is reflective of everyone’s commitment to preserving that environment.”

The Best Places to Work Lists are compiled by independent research firm Quantum Workplace, which sent a survey to employees of hundreds of nominated companies in each city. Quantum then compiled scores based on worker retention and attraction strategies, corporate culture, amenities and benefits.
