

COVID-19 Resource Center

Gray Reed is here to help you and your business through the COVID-19 pandemic. Our attorneys have already begun to address some of the difficult legal issues facing our clients. For instance, we've already been assisting with issues relating to cancellation of contracts. We've also been working with clients to position them to deal with the possibility that many of their customers or counterparties will be seeking bankruptcy protection. In addition, we have established a COVID-19 Task Force, which is strategically comprised of litigators and transactional attorneys involved with a wide array of industries. In fact, members of the Task Force represented ConocoPhillips and Jani-King and prevailed in trial court and on appeal on a key issue impacting most industries during this time (force majeure).

Below are links to Gray Reed articles that may provide important guidance as you begin to deal with consequences of the pandemic. As more articles and resources from our firm become available, we will add them to the list below.
